Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Tuesday 02 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mild conditions continue overnight with winds easing.

This Evening and Tonight:
Any showers will continue clearing to the east leaving a largely dry night with clear spells. During the small hours, an area of rain, heavy at times, will arrive from the south. Feeling mild, and winds easing through the night. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Wednesday:
Rain over eastern parts of the region will clear through the morning, leaving the day mostly dry with some sunshine, although there is still a chance of a few showers. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Mild and cloudy with showers on Thursday, possibly heavy and thundery. Feeling colder on Friday and Saturday with further scattered showers, heavy at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.